by Abbey Abraham on June 16th 2010

Trio Interiors Inc., (www.triointeriordesign.com), officially announced today their first-of-its kind services of professional design, merchandising and educational services 100% focused around sustainable living and sustainable materials. The unique interior design firm has furnished and designed multiple apartment complexes and common spaces all to exquisite taste with much more than simply a touch of recyclable or green splashes and dashes. The company genuinely sets itself apart by helping their clientele to understand renewable energy, sustainable materials, and sustainable methodologies enabling them to make first -class design and lifestyle choices.

"We are different from our competitors because we really have the background and knowledge needed to design and educate our clients on sustainability," states Principal Designer and CEO Angela Harris. "Most companies really do not understand sustainability or sustainable systems. They are merely practicing or saying they are "Green" or "Eco-friendly" as a marketing push. Without a true understanding of what sustainability means or how to incorporate it into day to day high quality living. We continue to excel as we teach and then implement our breathtaking designs."

Trio Interiors Inc.'s services range nationally as they continue to spread their knowledge, skill and design implementation methods for sustainable living and the holistic approach to home and apartment interiors. The firm is no stranger to the industry and since 1999 has worked on many large, successful projects such as Red Peak Properties, The Seasons at Cherry Creek, and The Anboretum. With the recent 40th anniversary of Earth Day they are continuing to spread their message of how lifestyle changes can effectively be made through interior design beauty and sustainable material, and sustainable systems focus.
